TO WEBB E. HARMON
 Announcement of the engagement of Miss Mary Edith Colborn, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Colborn, to Webb E. Harmon, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. S. Harmon of East Crawford avenue, was made at a beautifully appointed tea given this afternoon by Miss Colborn at her home in West Morton avenue. The hours were from 2 to 5:30 o'clock. A color scheme of pink and white was effectively carried out in the decorations and delicious luncheon, at which covers were laid for thirty young friends of the hostess. The table was centered with a beautiful arrangement of pink and white flowers, and the favors were small pink satin bags, filled with rice and tied with pink satin ribbon to which small pink hearts bearing the name of Miss Colborn and Mr. Harmon were attached. Ferns, roses and peonies were artistically arranged in all the rooms. A delightful musical program, including vocal solos by Miss Mary Edith Colborn, piano by Miss Elizabeth Patterson, and Miss Olive VanHorn, was rendered during the afternoon. The engagement is one of unusual interest to the many friends of Miss Colborn and her fiancé, both being popular socially. Mr. Harmon is a veteran of the World War, serving overseas with the Medical Detachment of the 319th Infantry. He is stock auditor for the West Penn Railway company. The date for the wedding was not announced. Miss Colborn's bridesmaids were Miss O. P. Moser, Miss Margaret Dull, and Miss Elizabeth Patterson. Out of town guests were Mrs. H. F. VanHorn and daughter, Miss Olive, Miss Lillian Kepner and Misses Katherine and Tillie Tannehill, Scottsdale, Miss Ellen Jackson, Uniontown; Miss Jeannette Short and Mrs. Clarence Strain, St. Junction, and Mrs. F. K. Bailey, Okopyle.

ICE CREAM PRICES CUT

L. N. Hagan Company Makes Two Reductions in Six Weeks.

Notwithstanding the fact that the products which enter into the manufacture of ice cream are virtually as high as they were during the winter and labor is equally as high, the L. N. Hagan Ice Cream Company in order to assist in restoring normal prices have announced within the last six weeks two cuts in their prices. The first slash—that of 10 cents a gallon—was made April 1st and on May 16 another drop of 20 cents a gallon was ordered. On May 16 Vanilla cream dropped from $1.50 a gallon to $1.30 and the other flavors from $1.55 to $1.45 a gallon. At the present time the Hagan ice cream is 30 cents cheaper than it was after June 1 of last year. On June 1, 1920 a raise of 20 cents was made on ice cream. Now ice cream is 10 cents cheaper on the gallon than before the June, 1920 raise.

State experts are unanimous in the opinion that the Hagan Ice Cream factories are the most modern in the state. The freezing and hardening rooms are unexcelled in Western Pennsylvania, and the machinery, equipment and formulas are up to the minute. It is contended by persons in a position to know that the Hagan people are manufacturing one of the finest products in the eastern section of the country.—Adv-21-12.

"Way Down East"

The gate of seats reservations for the engagement of D. W. Griffith's winter spectacle "Way Down East" opens at the box office of the West End theatre, Uniontown, this morning.

The presentation at Uniontown begins next Thursday night and continues daily thereafter with matinees in the afternoon and nightly for the remaining two days.

Basically "Way Down East" is a presentation of that delightful story of New England rural life which Lottie Blair Parker and Joseph R. Grismer made so familiar upon the American stage covering a period of more than a decade. By Griffith's treatment, it becomes a new art, vibrant with a life that is all but forgotten passing from view and infused with realism and tenderness plus the finest mingling of pastoral scenes ever conceived for an American drama. Music adds its charm to this swelling appeal and the combination speaks a new form of expression to every sense that evokes the playhouse for entertainment and illustration.

It is deemed essential to advise the readers of this paper that "Way Down East" is going to pack the theatre from the opening presentation and it will be prudent for you to make your reservations well in advance and before the word of its singular power and charm puts seats in the greatest demand.

The Most Beautiful Car in America

A Car With Personality

There is an air of distinction about the New Series "Glenbrook" that you will find in no other moderate priced, five passenger car. That is why it has been adopted by really smart people who will not tolerate the commonplace.

Then, remember, it not only looks but acts the thoroughbred. Under the hood there is a marvelously efficient motor that accelerates from five to twenty five miles per hour in nine seconds flat. This means giant energy for hills and every test of the highway.

Last, but not least, the "Glenbrook" is a rigid Economist. It extracts every atom of power from a gallon of gasoline and turns up surprising mileage on a set of tires. It is a thrift car with a keen sporting personality—a very hard combination to find.

But we ask you to establish these facts for yourself. Take just one ride in the "Glenbrook" and discover what actually lies hidden under the hood. It will prove a revelation, we believe, and a liberal education in strictly modern engineering.

HAD FUN WITH HIS CRITICS BUT NEVER "PASSED THE BUCK"

only reply was that the order spoke for itself; that young men coming in to the navy instinctively knew which was right and which was left, but were confused by "port" and "starboard" and the same thing was true of civilians. And I let it go at that.

One day a newspaper friend came into the department and said to me: "I have just learned the history of your 'port' and 'starboard' order about which you have been criticized and ridiculed so much. It's a beautiful story and I am going to print the true story so that the people will see you are not responsible for that order."

Board Is for Change.

"But I am responsible for it," I replied. "The truth is, as you have learned, but not from me, that the order was first considered by the general board before I became secretary of the navy, and after a time they reached the conclusion, only one member doubting and registering no dissent, that 'right' and 'left' were better terms to be employed. At the time they made their decision I had never so much as heard that the question was under discussion. After their decision the order was drafted in the customary way and was presented to me in the regular course for signature."

"What is this?" I asked of the admiral who brought it in with a batch of mail. He explained it and its history. I deliberately placed it in a private drawer of my desk, told the admiral that I hated to see old naval traditions and things discarded without a good reason; that I would not sign it then, but would think about it. He believed it was a good order and could do no harm. A few days afterward I was talking with Admiral Dewey and brought the matter up. He said that holding onto old traditions which had to be taught and retaught to every new enlisted man was out of date, and when it was so easy for the youngest to understand right and left, the board could see no good reason why right and left should not be substituted for the ancient terms. That seemed sensible to me and so I went back to the department, signed the order, gave it to the press, and then the avil chorus began!

Doesn't "Pass the Buck."

"Why don't you," asked my newspaper friend—and I am proud to have many in my profession—"just tell the story as I have learned it. When the people know and understand the facts, they will see that all their criticism of you is unjust and ridiculous. You owe it to yourself to do this."

I explained to him that without the signature of the secretary of the navy the order could not have been issued, that the responsibility of signing rested on me alone, that I had declined to sign my signature to the order as drawn would have been a mere scrap of paper, and that I had never had any public office with a public officer who sought to escape responsibility by "passing the buck" and saying he "acted upon the advice of my advisers."

"No," I issued the order," I replied. "It is a mistake. I made it with my eyes open. I could shift it to the general board, then the general board could be exercising the functions of the secretary of the navy, and for the once I would have abdicated my office. Moreover, the chief defect in the navy—and it is in the army and other places, as well—is the confusion of 'passing the buck.' I may commit all the other crimes in the criminal catalogue, but as long as I am secretary of the navy I will initiate my old military political hero and fellow Puritan, Andrew Jackson, who, when some action of his administration was resented, had a habit of saying: 'I take the responsibility.'"

I am Over the Wine-Mess Order.

Do you remember the fun the papers had when I issued the wine-mess order, way back in 1917? Sometimes I hear thought the paragraphs and the cartoonists ought to have shared with me the pay they received out of the opportunity that order gave them to draw pictures and write poetry. But none of them offered. It was a common, almost daily, occurrence to see myself pictured as a long-faced and angular ancient Puritan old maid driving the joy out of existence. Life, indeed, found my order and subsequent actions so amusing or ridiculous or revolutionary—or all three, that it got out an illustrated "Josephus Daniels Edition."

Talk about blue laws and putting men in the stocks for following the conscience! What else was life doing to me under the belief it was pilorying narrowness and Puritanism? I wish to say this about life, for honesty and frankness are virtues which ought to be commended everywhere: When the World War broke and the navy demonstrated its efficiency, life wrote "An Apology to Josephus Daniels."

Critics Converted Into Boosters.

That simple order, which forbade the introduction of intoxicants on any ship or shore station in the navy except for medicinal purposes, has demonstrated its wisdom. Only one officer in the navy knew it was to be issued until it was read in the papers, and that officer was Admiral Bratton, surgeon general of the navy. He recognized it, and when that fact became known he came in for his share of the abuse which followed. I am sure he is entitled to his share of the honor for its later almost universal approval. I do not take credit or blame, whichever way you look at it, for the fact that this order making the navy dry accelerated the coming of national prohibition, but it is a satisfaction to me that it did not deter it.

The order did not make me as popular in the navy as it deserved to do. I knew, of course, I was taking a course which would contravene tradition, and so a few older officers tradition is sacred. More than that, I knew excellent officers would resent it because they believed it would improperly convey an impression that drinking is so general in the navy that such an order was necessary to insure sobriety and efficiency.

Of course, drinking to excess was rare and my only hesitation about issuing the order was the reflection that it might convey such a misleading impression to the public.

Victory Over Armor Plate Makers.

But the greatest sin I committed, certainly the one responsible for the continued, organized and well-oiled criticisms which never let up except during the war, was my successful contest with the steel companies and powder concerns which made armor plate and projectiles and smokeless powder and other munitions for the navy.

I found upon examination that all three of the armor plate plants, by some hypnotic method beyond my understanding, bid exactly the same price to a cent when bids were asked for armor plate. I found they had sold armor plate to Russia for less than they charged to the American navy. I became convinced that there later came into existence an understanding that manufacturers of armor at home or abroad would not compete; that our navy was being charged a price that had little relation to the cost of production and that competition was a sham.

In smokeless powder I found the navy could manufacture it for 35 cents and that the powder trust was charging the navy 55 cents per pound for it. I found that some years before, under the dynamic advocacy of Senator Tillman, Congress had appropriated money and authorized the erection of an armor plate plant, but that the word "provided" had by some means or other defeated the congressional intent for the government to make its own armor and free itself from monopoly-made articles.

Great Is Diana of the Ephesians.

What was my duty? First to give Congress and the American people the facts. It was done and as a result Congress gave the money early in my administration to enlarge the smokeless powder plant and later to construct a plant in which armor for our ships could be made.

But the last was obtained after the hardest and most bitter fight I had during my eight years' term. Certain manufacturers of armor plate, thinking they would lose their part of the monopoly in business and in price, lobbied the congressmen of Ephesus, who, when Paul endangered their craft by preaching the true doctrine, cried out for the space of hours, "Great is Diana of the Ephesians!"

There was no such noisy demonstration at the navy, but those armor plate makers bought up space in all the newspapers and for weeks, in frenzied appeals and criticisms of the secretary of the navy, sought to prevent the armor plant appropriation. As a matter of fact, without my knowledge, because while in Washington I did not manage my paper, I found that the Raleigh News and Observer was printing those advertisements telling what an awful fellow I was to interfere with the tripartite method of "all Gals" is divided into three parts" practiced by the makers of armor plate. "It was a shame to take the money."

The Unpardonable Sin.

I won the fight in the year before war was declared. But I had committed the unpardonable sin in the trust circle, and their sympathies addressed themselves to the delectable task of trying to prove that a country officer was running the navy.

But they never referred to the armor plate plant or their defeat in that contest!

That is not the plan the monopolistic interests adopt when they wish to get even with a public official who denies them a back-door entrance or a special privilege. It is something else that he has done wrong. They are past masters in the art of camouflage when they wish to direct public opinion. I could trace the source and inspiration of the greatest and well-directed shafts appearing in periodicals not known to be controlled by "the interests."

And it kept up until in the acid test of war the navy did its great job so well that results silenced criticism. And I am happy to say, in the World War some of the men who had inspired the attacks during the Congressional fight, when country rose above interest, served their country faithfully and forgot all else, and enemies of 1914 in 1917-18 all worked together as comrades and co-workers and became friends in our genuine Americanism. One of the best products of war was their better understanding.

Not All Criticism Selfish.

It is far from me to seek to convey the impression that all criticism growing out of the armor plate fight was inspired by selfish interests. I would not bring such an indictment against my profession. There were editors so much opposed to government manufacture of anything, even munitions of war, that they fought it upon principle. But that does not alter the fact that "the interests," at one time including some oil and coal profiteers, joined the cry that the secretary of the navy was "destroying the navy."

Senate Investigation.

The result of the long hearings by the Senate Naval Affairs committee served to give me and the officers charged with responsibility for the conduct of the war opportunity to place in permanent form the real achievements of the navy in war and its preparation in peace.

The result of all the hearings in that so-called investigation, was to strengthen the American people in their conviction that a great job had been done in a great way, and if mistakes were made they were errors common to human lack of perfection. For myself, looking back upon the airing of differences and grievances in detail the navy's story of magnificent contribution, it supplied facts and figures and incorporated, from which some able historians, unbiassed by ambition or abating grievances, or moved by partisanship, will one day write a story which will glow with the sacrifice and service of the 600,000 men who served in the American navy in 1917-18.

Keeps Stream Fresh and Pure.

Not one clue in the eight years did I permit my sense of the injustices of much criticism to cause me to lose sight of the truth that, in a government like ours, criticism is necessary to keep the current fresh and pure. From the sincere criticism and even from captious critic I learned more than I can set down. I would in those days often ask myself the question: "Was I right?" or "Is the criticism just?" or "How can a better policy strengthen the navy?"

For the first time now that I am back on the job of telling public officials how much better an official I write to express my obligation to my honest critics. They often help an open-minded man more than his friends.

(The possibility that the next war will be fought in the air or under the sea is subject of Monday's article.)

WHAT IS THIEF?

Briefly, it is the implacable enemy of the honest man.

Thrift consists in knowing what you are spending and what you are getting for the money; in planning your expenditures so that something will be saved, and in investing your savings safely—in a savings account, for instance, with the old, reliable First National of Connellsville, which will furnish, without charge, a little Liberty Bell bank to help you to be thrifty.—Adv.

Sold everywhere.—Adv.

Big Loss by Fire.

Every one knows that when money has been destroyed by fire it is a loss, and usually a big loss, as the person who keeps money at home instead of placing it in the bank usually has quite a sum of it stowed away. The surest and safest way to protect your money against loss by fire is to place it in the Citizens' National Bank, either in a checking or savings account.—Adv.

About Digestion.

It is claimed that only half as much food is required when it is thoroughly masticated. Digestion begins in the mouth and a thorough mastication of the food is of the greatest importance. When needed take Chamberlain's Tablets to strengthen the digestion and insure a regular movement of the bowels.—Adv.

Nine Million Cars Registered.

A total of 211,295 motor cars, including commercial vehicles, were registered last year in the 48 states and District of Columbia, according to figures compiled by the bureau of public roads of the Department of Agriculture. There were also registered a total of 238,144 motorcycles.
